ANGLO-CHINESE DICTIONARY published

OR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new arts which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and science generally, which the rapid advance foreign relations has imposed upon them, are given in extenso. Each and every word is illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. The Court and Panti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on each syllable, the best principle hitherto attained. The typographical display shows the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English text correspond.

the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not easily attained, and dispensing with those margins and vacant spaces which have before characterized Chinese publications. For practical purposes the arrangement of work is so complete, that a reference to pages enables a person who understands English to communicate fully.

In this respect the work will be found accessible to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To those resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasionally.

illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. More's Vocabulary contains about 15,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English-Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst the present work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 800,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and elementary work, as yet unpublished, the out of this difficult language absolutely res examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which one general meaning. Of these examples work contains more than five times as as any other Dictionary hitherto published.

comprises upwards of two thousand large
